

the consideration of recording programming to prevent indecent programs would be a huge burden not only to small market operators but operators in any market size. consider the fact recording programming will not eliminate indecency. it would only put the burden of proof on an operator to establish their innocence which is diometrically opposed to our legal system. the cost and support cost of instituting this type of operation could cripple small market stations who have already had to revert to satellite broadcasting as a means to cut costs. why not let responsible operators continue to operate in the public interest as they have and punish only the offenders. i honestly feel if something so offensive is broadcast, the commission would receive more than one complaint.thank you,
